NEW HARMONY

And Its Centennial—Founded by Baptists Who Left Wonderful Impress On Beautiful Country.

(By Dr. A. G. Browning.)

But there came dissatisfaction and contentions and finally an end to the Rapp community. Robert Owen of Lanark, Scotland, for the insignificant sum of two hundred thousand dollars became owner of the vast possessions, and renamed the town New Harmony in 1825, the Rapps returning to Pennsylvania. Robert Owen was a self-made man. From youth he gave evidence of business capacity, and at 29 years was sole manager of a cotton mill with 500 operators. He married the daughter of David Dale, a leading mill owner of Scotland. At this period in his history the industrial slavery existing among operators throughout Great Britain and the absolute suffering coming of it has never been approximated elsewhere. Regarding the existing wrongs the logical result of unequal distribution of private property, he conceived the idea of universal reformation by means of communities and the holding thereby, all property in common—socialism. His great heart was right in this as in all things; but his head was not in accord. Great Britain too slow for his eager purpose, he too turned to America, and after negotiations, purchased all of Rapp's great holdings at New Harmony. And from this began a new movement in advance, 'tis told, of that of his predecessor, but alike doomed to failure as regards his cherished purpose.

Coming to active development of life plans, Owen soon felt pressing necessity for more funds for his co-operative scheme especially, and sold one half his interests to William Maclure, founder of the Academy of Science, Philadelphia. Then a great plan was to introduce perfect equality and extend an equal voice in the government to men and women. Maclure, from fondness and fitness to have exclusive control of educational features.

In about two years of the life of the community, many constitutions were proposed, adopted and rejected, with a final hopeless disagreement between the two, and a collapse of the enterprise.

This closed in a great measure, the experimental period of New Harmony's history; in time they came to assimilate and adopt modes and customs of their environment. Whilst Owen might be rightly termed an experimentalist, or dreamer, he was in fact a man of great depth, and did not fail during the remainder of his long life to so impress his fellow citizens, and the outer world. His trend was always for good as he saw it. His sons, Robert Dale, David Dale and Richard Dale—all retaining the maternal patronymic—attached to real eminence in statesmanship, art and science. Robert Dale, 'tis said, influenced Mr. Lincoln in a special dilemma, beyond all others; David Dale became an authority in geology and natural science. I had the entire to his laboratory at New Harmony and being but a youth, regarded it a kindly condescension on his part. Richard Dale, the youngest son, arose to distinction in the army.

The distinguished partner, William Maclure, became almost wasteful in his benefactions to his new home. Of many, the Working Men's Institute and the matchless Library, endowed by him will stand monumental to his great soul through long time to come. New Harmony, through all her weird existence, has surely been blessed through Owen, Maclure and many, many more of like heart and brain.

Allow one the privilege of the following extract from a recent communication, the authoress being an accomplished representative of New Harmony's best, past or present. It gives beautiful and touching pen-picture of the old-town from the more recent past to the writing.

"Between the years 1825 and 1850 this quaint little town on 'the banks of the Wabash, far away,' was the mecca toward which every scientist of America (and many from other countries) sooner or later turned their faces. In 1839 the government made New Harmony headquarters for the United States Geological Survey. *** Remaining yet among the most interesting features of our town is its Library, first established by William Maclure and called the Working Men's Institute. It has received liberal donations from the foremost scientific workers of the country, until now the volumes number twelve thousand.

In 1894 Dr. Edward Murphy, a resident of New Harmony erected and presented to the town, a beautiful library building, built artistically of red brick and white stone, and two and one half stories above ground. On the first floor we have our library (Women's Library Club) and lecture room; on the second, our museum and art gallery. Dr. Murphy also presented the town with a fine collection of copies of the most famous paintings of Europe, which now hang in our spacious art gallery—Genios, 'Iris,' 'Aurora,' and 'The Dawn of the Muses,' on gold leaf; exquisite copies of Raphael's, Murillo's, Ruben's and Titian's masterpieces, together with many others of more modern date. ***

Another gift of his is our pretty little park of seven acres, nestling down at the foot of the hills, which seem to lend their green, sloping sides as a protection from wind and storm. It is here that beautiful shade trees, artistically grouped flower beds of every kind and color, intermingled with well kept, acorn-like walks and drives, enrich and deepen the vivid green carpet of our natural blue grass. It is here, under the blue canopy of Heaven one finds true religion and God's restorer to health and youth—fresh air and peaceful rest.

Our streets are well shaded, and through long lines of maples and silver leaf poplar you catch glimpses of beautiful homes, bespeaking the easy fortunes of the owners. To be invited within, the stranger is lost in admiration of its ornate decorations—rare antiquities, held dear from associations, pieces of ancient china, cut-glass, silver plate, fine statuary, paintings from old masters, old fashioned furniture that is almost priceless, which never fail to attract and interest visitors, tourists or curious seekers.

As a matter of fact, few places in the United States, not excepting Boston and Brook Farm, are so universally known and have been so alternately lauded and ridiculed as New Harmony, Posey County, Indiana. Byron quotes, Riley jokes us, other great writers praise us, while New York dailies caricature us.

But New Harmony has a history all its own. Its beginnings as far back among the passing memories of the past, dimmed by time, yet tenderly nursed in the pages of history as a place where the struggles to a higher plane of life were experienced by people who rushed in toward the poetic mysteries of the society and the community, only to find the prosaic realities.

We look back at our founders, the Happies, with much affection, as a child might look back and revere a dear, good grandparent, we admire their energy and grit, appreciate their trials and privations and are made aware of their heroic strides towards a more perfect state of society.

We look back at the Owen and Maclure community and feel grateful to them for their teachings and examples of charity and good will toward all men. Their motto was: "If we can not reconcile all opinions, let us endeavor to unite all hearts."

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mr. Alfry, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it."

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.

Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

We look back at the scientific period with pride, for its various influences have undoubtedly given tone and character to the place, and it will be readily observed that the impression made was deep, for we still enjoy the reputation of being the "Athens of the West," and although the noted scientific element have all passed away, the people of this little Hoosier town are highly educated, intelligent, traveled, hospitable and untiring in their enthusiasm regarding their historic old home, and their illustrious ancestors."

Such was the ancient town, as I knew of it; such the modern as I know it.

Florence, So. Dakota.—"I used to be very sick every month with bearing down pains and backache, and had headache a good deal of the time and very little appetite.
